

a dollar in his nice, cheery way; then he turned around and gave me $30-in just the same way! Don't you see?"

derstand. "I saw myself being paid always holding out my hand for charity!" And she was a most pathetic little figure as she upturned her palm.

"I couldn't stand it. So I threw down

"But you had no money!" said Iris.

He Caught Up the Portrait and Press-

She had his card and was reaching for

"You mustn't telephone anybody!"

the runaway bride insisted, "You

"What about Ned?" Bobble suddenly alone on the train with the honeymoon

"It is for his happiness as well as world will not be happy until women

Meanwhile Ned Warner began to be familiar with the bronze panther on the overhanging rock in the park and, easting back in his memory, reflected that he must have passed it about five

But why had June married him?

Why had she walked down the aisle of the Brynport chapel with him that morning? Perhaps the black Vandyked man was married, and marriage was the only road to June's freedom.

He could stand this train of thoughts

no longer. He whirled up Riverside frive, past the very house where June was then talking to Iris and turned his key in the lock of the place which was to have been home. Home! And this was his return! Here were all the furnishings which they had bought

It must be his task to find that man!

and sank down by the bed sobbing.

June was still June-and his June!

At that moment June and Iris were sitting in the big walnut paneled IIbrary, and Bobbie wandered in. When

"Don't go, Bobbie!" called Iris. She

"How did you guess my roll?" inquired the cheerful Bobbie, dragging up a handful of bills with nonchalant ease, at which June smiled in spite of her embarrassment. She had always walked straight up to him and held he saw the girls he started back.

"What's the price?" he asked.

out her hand. "Produce!"

"Oh, a hundred."

ireams of happiness.

together. Here had clustered all his luggage, flashing on his mind.

would be betraying my confidence."

"But what do you intend to do?"

to the telephone.

little guest room.

By special arrangement for this And she shuddered with the recollecpaper a photo-drama corresponding tion of her humiliation. "Then I had to the installments of "Runaway a dream," went on June. with more June" may now be seen at the leading moving picture theaters. By for being a wife, as mummy pays the arrangement made with the Mutual servants and Ned pays his stenogra-Film Corporation it is not only pos- pher. I saw Ned giving me money as sible to read "Runaway June" each he gives it to beggars! I saw myself week, but also afterward to see moving pictures illustrating our story.

SECOND EPISODE. In Pursuit of the Runaway Bride

CHAPTER I. IE runaway bride, who led the explained. She paused to remember chase, seemed to be lucky, for something-the black Vandyked man the traffic opened before her who now had her watch. He had like magic and closed behind bought it from the old lady on the her like a wall. As she turned into train, so that June could some day re-Central park at Fifty-ninth street, safe deem it. That was very nice of him, from immediate pursuit, the black Vandyked man's car was in a snarl at Fifth-sixth. As ne came out of that pocket he leaned forward, after a look abead, and spoke crisply to his driver. They stopped at the Plaza hotel, and the man, hurrying up the steps, suddenly paused. With a smile he drew from his pocket a tiny gold watch and opened it. Inside the lid was the picture of a beautiful young girl with a handsome collie. The black Vandyked man gazed at the picture for a moment in frowning meditation. It was the runaway bride

As he entered the hotel Ned's taxi, with the fluttering white ribbons, passed and turned into the park just as June Warner turned out of it at Seventy-second street, heading for River-

At that hour Iris Blethering sat pouring her voluble sadness into the ears of Bobbie in the Blethering home on Riverside drive. She had been school day chum and the bosom friend of June Moore, but now there was no June Moore, only a June Warner, and June Warner might become a stranger. "Rot," observed Bobbie. "How long | it when she noticed that Iris had gone are they going to be gone?"

"Three weeks. It's an eternity, Bob-

"Rot," said Bobbie. "Why doesn't somebody answer that doorbell?" It had only just rung, and immediately the hollow Blethering butler came through. He did not return to announce any one, however. Instead the caller rushed straight in and threw herself into the arms of Iris.

Bobble Blethering stood by and watched the tableau for a moment; then he went to the door and looked out. inquired. The only answer was a sob.

"Junie," pleaded Iris, "where's "I-I-I left Ned!" June wailed. "I ran away!'

"Aw, I say!" protested Bobbie. "What did be do, dear?" This from

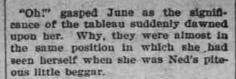

"He-he gave me money!"

The Black Vandyked Man. this numbly after awhile. "Did you say he gave you money?"

"Yes." June straightened up as she recognized the difficulty which lay before her. Irls, while a warm and loyal friend, was not exactly a thoughtful person nor a sensitive one and might perhaps not understand the deep ethical significance of what had happened.

Bobble didn't count "Just after the wedding breakfast mother gave me a purse, and if I had not left that on the library table at home I might not have known my pre- open way in which these two discussdicament until it was too late. When ed finances. Bobbie counted his mon-Ned and I were on the train, however, ey and held back a fragment of it. I missed the purse. While I was tell-ing Ned about it he tipped the porter to the good."

"Thanks, Bobbie," said Iris and turned to June. "If you want more, honey, in your struggle for independence. come right back, and I'll make Bobbie give it to us."

June shrank away. "Oh, I can't possibly take it! I didn't know you were going to ask Bobble!" "Where else do ! get it?" blurted the bosom friend. "Bobble's the easiest way." "That's just it." June pointed out "Can't you see what a beggar a dependent woman is? Don't you see that if I can't accept a gift of money from my husband I can't possibly let you accept for me a gift of money from your husband? Don't be angry, Iris, please, I'm fighting for a princi-

"Oh, Mr. Thomas Rot!" exploded

"That attitude is at the bottom of the whole thing, Bobbie," argued June, with spirit. "Because the man has supported the woman for ages he has made himself the master. That destroys the woman's self respect, and hair. love dies."

"She's a fine kid," said Bobbie heartily, "but if she's going to draw the line money which has been handed from a man to a woman she'll have the $30 and slipped off the train and to get it fresh from the mint." "What will you do, June?" fretted

"I got on the train anyhow and sold "If I only had that purse mummy my watch to a funny old lady," June gave me," mused June. "She got that from your father,"

Bobbie was unkind enough to remind "Oh, that was daddy's money," she brightly replied, no trace of concern on her brow, "and it's the last I can take couldn't you go out to the house and sny you'll send it to me?" "Just the thing!" Iris was bubbling immediately with enthusiasm. "We'll go right out now. Bobbie, call the car." "You mustn't let them know I'm nere," warned June. "You mustn't let

Within five minutes Iris and Bobbie in the swift little runabout were headed for Brynport. In the library June had found a picture of Ned among some other intimate photographs, and was with constant reference to this and amid constant talking to it and constant caressing of it that she penned her important message:

My Poor, Dear Boy-1 cannot explain in a letter what happened today. When I am free, dear Ned, I will make you understand and forgive. You must not try to

CHAPTER II.

UNT DEBBY came around the corner of the Moore house in all her giory-stiff lavender dress with the red posies on it yellow hat with the green feather, tan shoes and blue stockings. "Howdy, Aunt Debby!" Bobbie Blethering, with his chattel beside him. swung up the drive in his fast little runabout. June's parents came to the door.

John J. Moore in the blue and tan blurted, the thought of young Warner, smoking jacket which he had refused to wear until tenderness at June's ap-"Ned's a darling!" And June's lip | proaching departure had brought him quivered. "He's an angel! But I canto it, and Charlotte Moore in the gray not be a burden to be carried on Ned's silk dress embroidered by June's own back. I shall stay away from Ned unbands. til I achieve my own independence.

"Come right in," heartily invited Fa-Then we can walk together hand in ther Moore, and Mother Moore, with "Where's Ned?" he quite naturally hand-in mutual self respect and ac- soft eyes, shook Bobbie by one hand and Iris by both. cepting from each other nothing but "We have only a minute to stay." began Iris, starting to talk as they for mine," June insisted firmly. "The went into the library. "I heard from June," Iris rattled on. Father Moore, walk in strict equality with men, Iris. in the parlor, came straight over.

dear." She saw by the face of her "She missed her purse." glibly went friend that cold logic was wasted. The on Iris, while Bobble eyed her with adtwo girls walked upstairs, and Iris ushmiration. "She's afraid she lost it ered her still bosom friend into a cozy | Did she leave it here?" "Right on that table." And Mrs.

Moore's eyes sparkled. She took it from a drawer in a desk. "That girl always was careless about noney." laughed Mr. Moore as if it were a virtue.

Bobbie glanced at Iris. She was as serene as a plate of ice cream. "I'll send it to ber," offered Iris, and Mrs. Moore smilingly put it in her

"Why didn't June wire us?" puzzled father, his fists buiging in the pockets of his gay smoking jacket. "Yes, why didn't she?" voice was full of anxiety, but as she saw the unruffled expression of Iris Blethering's face she began to bridle. If Junie could wire her friend, why couldn't she wire her mother? "You have such slow delivery here," promptly explained Iris. "Just what did she say?" Iris cast her eyes to the celling and began telling off the words on her fin-

He caught up the portrait and pressed it to his lips and held it in his arms "Phone mother I can't find my purse. Did I forget it? Extremely happy Bushels of love to all. June." Twenty minutes were all the callers could spare. They drove down the boulevard. A taxicab flashed by them. but they did not notice it. Ned War ner was in the taxi, and he was out and up on the porch before the machine had come to a full stop. John Moore answered the bell, and he stood as if petrified when he saw his son-in-

> "Have you heard from June?" husk-"Isn't she with you?" The voice of Moore was strained and tense. Mrs. Moore came hurrying out, ber "Junie!" she cried. She ran down to open window. She came running back and caught Ned by the arm. "Where the taxi and peered in through the is my girl?" "Then she isn't here?" gasped Ned. "Come inside." John Moore's voice had lost all its color. He led the way into the library. "Now, what is all this about? Why are you here alone?" "I don't know. June is somewhere in New York. I was in hopes you had heard from her." "We did! She telegraphed to Iris that she had lost her purse. Iris left here with it to mail it to June."

"Then that's where she is!" There was relief in Ned's voice. "Sit down," said Moore, "Why are you not with her?"

"I don't know." There was a choke in Ned's voice. "She left me on the train-slipped away at Farnville." "She wouldn't do such a thing without good cause!" declared Mrs. Moore with firm conviction.

"What happened?" This sharply lost her purse. I gave her some money, and she went to sleep with her head on my shoulder. I pillowed her more comfortably on the seat by and by and went into the smoker. I drenminutes, and when I came back after hat in her hand. "He's at Sherry's!" we had passed Farnville she was gone. She left the money on the sent. Here it is." And he showed them the three crumpled bills, one partly torn.

"How do you know she returned to New York?" demanded Moore, "I saw her. I got off at the next station and telephoned. The station master at Farnville reported that he saw her getting on a down train. I took an express and overhauled her as we came into the Grand Central station. I saw her leave the station and get into a

"You are holding something back!" Moore charged. "I want to know the

"You have all I can tell you," declared Ned. He would not tell them about the black Vandyked man, and June was Mrs. Warner now. "Will you get your wraps, please.

Charlotte?" June's father finally said. and rose. "We are going to Iris. I'll order the car." They were grim and sflent as they sped away. While they rode the black Vandyked man, in Sherry's, sat at the end of a long table between a jovial host with a gray mustache and a ponderous man with heavily lidded eyes and short

There were a dozen placed at the table, and wine hissed at every plate. but the others of the party, which included a half dozen vivacious and gayly gowned young women, were dancing. The three men talked in low tones, their heads bent together, and the black Vandyked man was the from them now that I'm married. Iris, dyked man on the shoulder.

Warner, sitting quietly in a corner of the library with Bobbie and Iris and Where now should she go? The vestibule.

her room. pushed through ahead of the men. John Moore walked straight to Bobspiring finger at that young man.

"Where's my girl?" he demanded. Bobbie slowly straightened. "Well, she's here," he said.

"I'll tell you what of it!" said Iris. you just yet, and she won't!"

does it all mean?" Iris took two letters from the mantel. She gave one to Ned and one to Mrs.

"Why are you here alone?"

Moore. Her husband looked over her thoulder. The letter was addressed totain in a letter why, I was compelled to eave Ned. Some day I will make you anderstand and forgive. Please be good o dear Ned and love

YOUR LITTLE JUNIE. "Here's the man!" shouted Ned, his voice full of sudden fury. He held a pair of gloves in one hand and a card in the other. "These are June's gloves, They were lying on the table, and this card was in them!"

"They're my gloves!" called Iris, but Ned laughed at her. There was no mistaking those dainty, blue embroidered bits of white kid.

"Now, I'll tell you," went on Ned. "This man, Gilbert Blye, whose name I now know for the first time, was with her from the moment she left me until she came here. He is a tall, black Vandyked man, and at Farnville he was seen assisting June on the down train. I saw them myself through the car window talking together. I want to find Gilbert Blye! Are you hiding him too?" And he turned savagely on Iris.

Bobble lounged forward. "That'll do, Ned." he warned. "Iris, call June." "Junie!" They heard Iris throwing loors open and running through the house, calling June. Ned darted up the stairs, but in the hall Iris met him with a frightened face. "She is gone!" They all searched for her then, but here was no trace of her. CHAPTER III.

MRS. GILBERT BLYE was in shrill voiced converse with a big green parrot, which, from length and sharpness of nose and height of eye arches, might have been a sister to her. A maid announced that some one had wanted to see Mr Blye, and, since he was not at home would Mrs. Blye care to say where he was? He came to New York on an

Mrs. Blye rose instantly. She salled straight into the hall and confronted the five earnest visitors. "Did you say Mr. Blye returned on an early train?" "Yes." Ned tried not to speak curtly.

"I saw him." "I am Mrs. Blve. Is there anything can do for you?" The lady was studying the group with a shrewlike penetration. Mrs. Blye began to worry herself. Also she began to suspec That last was her specialty. "If you will tell me the nature of your busin with Mr. Blye I may be able to locate

"Oh!" And Mrs. Blye's voice rose "Your daughter!" She glared at them for a moment. "Will you please walt?"

ped in to look at her about every five She was back, blazing. She had her taxi rattled on. He jumped in his

An electric coupe stood at the door She slammed into that, turned on the lights and rolled away with as much vigor as was in the capacity of her machine. Bobble's runabout darted after her and passed her and then came the limousine with Mr. and Mrs. Moore and Ned.

Poor June! It had been hard for her to leave those beloved voices down most silent. Finally he began to talk there in the library, but she had made and grew enthusiastic, and presently up her mind very firmly that neither he drew forth June's little gold watch | she nor Ned could be happy if she was Then he flashed open the lid. All always to feel that she was a chattel. three men bent eagerly over it. They She ran back to the desk for Ned's gazed upon the lovely features of the photograph, then stepped lightly out runaway bride, their faces bent close on the tiny side porch, jumped down to together. They clapped the black Van- the little embankment and fied, as light as thistledown, along the side of It was during this time that June the house and out at the little grocer's with her mother's purse still in her apartments, their home, hers and hand, heard a familiar voice in the Ned's! She hurried up in that direction, but at the first corner she stopped "Daddy!" She dashed from her for an instant and darted over toward chair in a flash and went upstairs to Broadway. She had realized three things almost simultaneously - first "Where's Junie?" Mrs. Moore had that they might come out of the Blethering house at any instant and see her second, that she had no key and, third, ble Blethering and shook an awe inthat Ned might come there. It would be the most likely place for him to go in his loneliness.

In fond memory, stopping at the first dark corner, she went over each of the dear rooms, furnished just to fit her and delight her-the white and June has decided not to see any of gold reception room, the white and rose drawing room, the white and "Iris," begged Mrs. Moore, "what black library, the white and blue bedroom, the all white kitchen. She saw Ned in every room and herself there. Now flushed and happy she was experimenting with the toy range, now they were dining together all alone. She was playfully feeding Ned, and he was seasoning the meal with stolen kisses, walking clear around the table to get them. They were spending an evening of blissful companionship in the library.

She suddenly held her handkerchief to her mouth to choke back a sob. On Broadway she hailed a passing taxi.

All was sparkling at Sherry's, but Gilbert Blye had taken small share in a black eyed young woman, the most vivacious of the party, called him to task for his evening of secret schem-"You're up to some devilment," she charged, playfully tweaking his beard. "Come and dance with me." "Sorry, Tommy," he told her, with that queer smile on his lips, "but I've a previous engagement." "She can wait," pouted the girl. She dragged Blye away from the table. "Take my car, Gill" called the gray mustached host. "Certainly," replied Blye, and the three men exchanged a smile. "I'll dance one round with Tommy; then

Before that round was over, however, Gilbert Biye saw an apparition in the doorway, and his face turned cold. The apparition was a tall, angular woman with a long, high nose and high arched brows, who was trying to bore Gilbert Blye through and through with a double eyed glare of burning ferocity. He hurried over to his wife. She had shrilled: "Who is that woman?" One lean, long finger pointed accusingly at the vivacious black eyed girl with whom Gil had been dancing. "I shall explain nothing," said Gilbert. "I'm through!" He left her contemptuously, leaving her stunned by this unexpected revolt. As he went down the steps he heard her shricking something after him, and he hurried. As he dashed out of the door he ran into a group who were coming in. They were the Moores, the Bletherings and Ned Warner, and he was upon them and past them and jumping into the luxuriously furnished racing limousine, with the little watch in his hand, before they realized that this was the man they were seeking. "There he goes!" cried Ned. "The scoundrel!"

Blye, moving rapidly away, saw the confusion and blamed his wife for the scene, for now she was in the lead of the excited group, which was rushing toward him.

The house of the Moores at Brynport was dark when June arrived, the dear old house. It stood back amid the dim trees, with a dignity and beauty which she had never before thoroughly appreciated, and at the gate she hesitated as if, with no one to welcome her, she had no right here. There was a welcome, though, and a joyous one, a loud, hearty one, a series of delighted barks from her dog

The hole through which he usually emerged had been found and closed, but he wasted no time on that. He merely came through the window, bringing a part of the sash with him, and here he was running circles around her, leaping at her, crouching. barking at the top of his voice, doing everything in his power to show her that she was a welcome visitor at this Richmond, $300. place and in his heart at any bour of the night or day.

He had known her very presence from far back in the shed. It was the work of a minute for June to clamber through an unlocked kitchen window and to rush upstairs, get her maid, Marie, seize several garments and drag with her the astound-

"Miss June! Miss June!" cried Aunt Debby, out of breath from ru but June only waved a hand at her as the taxi swept out of the drive.

A limousine had atopped in front of the house, and a black Vandyked man own car and gave the word and start-

Where Now Should She wo

ed in swirt pursuit. The two machines were still in sight when the runabout of Bobble and Iris dashed around the circle. "Is June here?" called Iris.

"Dat's her goin' yonder!" The runabout was gone with a whiz. and immediately after came the family "Is June here?" called all three of the occupants at once. "She's just done gone! The gentle man with black whiskers has just done gone! Mr. Bobble and Miss Iris has just done gone! Whooh!" Around the corner there rolled an electric coupe. It was brilliantly lighted, and in it sat an angular woman with a high, long nose and high arched brows, beneath which glittered two sharp eyes.

"Lawdy, no!" puffed Aunt Debby.

"Say!" shrilled the occupant of the Aunt Debby, her broad hand on ber stomach, pointed down the road. TO BE CONTINUED

TIRED, WEAK AND NERVOUS

Why Are So Many Richmond People In This Condition? Feel tired out, irritable and depressed

Urine irregular; back weak and pain These are symptoms that suggest kie

When the kidneys call for help, Assist them with a tested kidney reu

Give them the help they need No remedy more highly recommended han Doan's Kidney Pills. Backed by home testimony.

Endorsed by Richmond people, Mrs. J. H. Young, 432 North Third street, Richmond, Ky., says: 'I had dizzy headaches and often felt nervous. The action of my kidneys was irregula and I suffered from backache. Doan's the bilarity. He had risen to go when Kidney Pills, procured at Middelton's Drug Store, made me better in every Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy-get Doan's Kidney Pills-the same that Mrs. Young had. Foster-Mi!burn Company, Props. Buffalo, New York.

Real Estate Transfers.

J. B. Kindred to W. B. Wilson, 118 cres, $11,826. Wm. Arvin to W. B. Wilson, 75 acres, 87.540. W. F. Cotton to Wm. Taylor, 39 acres $3,340 50. Ed Ellington to A. C. Dennis, 12 acres, Z. R. Dennis to A. C Dennis, 4 acres Younger Norris to A. C. Dennis, tores, $575.

D. I. Hisle to Butler Dunn, etc., 118 scres, $12,663. Sarah B. Luxon to W. E. Luxon, 209 cres. $13,722.

W. E. Luxon to Harry B. Hanger, 209 acres, $15,786. John W. Grider to J. R Parks, 117 acres, $3,000. Smith Williams, Trustee, to A.

Million, 125 acres, $3,000. V. L. Roberts to Francis Million, 48 acres, $750. Sam L. Ross to Robt. Walker, 31 acr's $3,800.

Hume C. Park to J. Embry Park, etc. 1I acres, $1,000. Blakeman Bros. to L. N. Whittaker. 2 acres. $2,000. Mary J. Covington to Jett Williams, 60 acres. $1. W. T. Cotton to J. T. Dawson, 17 acrs $1,000. J. F Dawson to T. E. Dawson, 12 of 17 1 2 acres, $500. J. L. Whicker to Collins Long, 76 ac's, 87,260 Allen Azbill to John Todd, 1-2 acre

Chas. Harvey to Terry M. Perkins, 37 acres, $2,300. Perry Tussey to Nay Coy, 714 acres Wm. Ashcraft to Jas. Ashcraft, 20 acres, $1,400. James Withers to Garland Laws, 3 Madison Burgin to Roscoe Whitlock, 5 acres. $3,000. Daniel Browning to Wm. Browning, 83 acres, $1,000. Adaline Holland to John W. Holland 60 acres, 81.

TOWN LOTS. T. K. Hamilton to J. W. Scudder W. M. Jones' heirs to John Gordon, or Richmond, $1,000. Wm. Isancs to T. H. Sale, Berea,

J. R. Newberry to A. H Thomas, Richmond, 81. G. W. Hook to Nancy J. Freeman, P. Cornelius to Howard Hudson, Be-

John E. Calfee, etc., to Howard Hud-Eliza Curtis to Elijah Saunders, Berea,

VICK'S Freumonis

1915

A Toast to 1915

Here's to the future's joys And gains; Here's to the goods I'll buy At Lane's!

(Repeat this seven times during Holidays and it will bring you Good Luck)

> We still have a few

Rugs and Carpet Samples

that we are selling

At a Bargain

Bennett and Higgins

Furniture and Undertaking

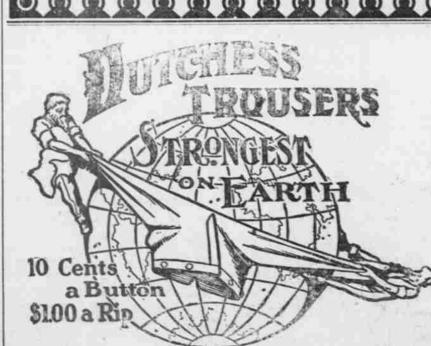

You Need a Tonic

There are times in every woman's life when she needs a tonic to help her over the hard places. When that time comes to you, you know what tonic to take-Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is composed of purely vegetable ingredients, which act on the weakened womanly or and helps build them back to strength and health. It has benefited thousands and thousands of weak, ailing women in its past half century of wonderful success, and it will do the same for you.

You can't make a mistake in taking

Miss Amelia Wilson, R. F. D. No. 4, Alma, Ark., says: "I think Cardui is the greatest medicine on earth, for women. Before I began to take Cardui, I was so weak and nervous, and had such awful dizzy spells and a poor appetite. Now I feel as well and as strong as I ever did, and can eat most anything."

Begin taking Cardui today. Sold by all dealers. Has Helped Thousands.

CROSSETTS HOES .-- the kind that will wear and satisfy you. For the BEST come to

JOHN E. SEXTON

City Comforts in Country: Keep The Family on Farm

The automobile has helped to make farm life more pleasant. Thousands of farmers have bought them and dealers have made noney. But we have more to sell to the farmer, and a better reason for selling it than has the Auto dealer. We can convince the farmer that running water, Modern Plumbing, Sewerage Disposal and Electric Lights will do more to make their life easier and happier all the year round than joy riding in summer. Estimates and information

Richmond Heating & Plumbing Co

Chicken Chowder We also handle all kinds of Grits and Shells for chickens. Also Molasses Feed for horses and and cows

The Climax-Madisonian $1 a Year

An Absolute Guarantee

More eggs or money back is what we have to say to every poultry raiser to whom we sell

R. H. McKinney

Phones 16 and 223

Corner 2nd and Irvine Streets